I have been using a Chambers Fireless Cooking Gas Range for the past fourteen years. Its advantages over other ranges are outstanding. It saves gas—it is very convenient—foods have a better flavor. I wish it were possible to get all my household equipment as satisfactory as my Chambers stove.

We wonder what the Signers of the Declaration of Independence would say if they were here today to look back over the course of history and tell us which event of the Revolution they would consider the most important in the development of the republic of their dreams. Would not the capture of Fort Sackville by George Rogers Clark appeal to them as one of the most important victories of the rebellion? Would they not say with the Indiana historian (Mr. Logan Esarey): "The culmination of this expedition was one of the romantic exploits of the Revolution. Its results have been as far-reaching as those of any other achievement of that war, save the achievement of Independence itself."

George Rogers Clark, that brave Kentucky pioneer youth, foresaw the plans of the English to retain permanently their hold on the west, and approached his old friend, that fiery patriot, Governor Patrick Henry of Virginia, with his idea to drive the old enemy from the Mississippi Valley. Henry could not fail to catch the spirit of the earnest appeal of his faithful soldier, and gave him leave to raise a small army and proceed with his plans.

The army was gathered here and there among the states along the route as they floated down the Ohio River. They landed at Maise Isle (opposite the present city of Jeffersonville, Ind.), where they were drilled for a few weeks within the rude stockade. Many recruits from that vicinity joined the little band and on June 24, 1778, Col. Clarke and his little army started from Clarksville to the Poste on the Wabash.

Clarksville to Vincennes! The beginning and the end of Clarke's journey to fame! The beginning and the end of his wonderful dream—of that beautiful trail across the untraveled wilderness and trackless prairies—that beautiful trail of ideals, of vision, of determination, blazed forever and made permanent and everlastingly glorious by the golden sacrifice and crimson blood of patriots.

For hardship and suffering, Clarke's march across the Illinois prairies in the month of February, 1779, holds equal place with that awful experience of Washington's army at Valley Forge the previous winter.

One hundred and fifty years have passed since that morning when Hamilton, followed by his gaily uniformed garrison, marched out of Fort Sackville and surrendered his sword to Col. George Rogers Clarke, who received it proudly before his little group of nondescript soldiers in buckskins.

One hundred and fifty years have passed since that rude flag of thirteen alternate stripes of red and green homespun (*) was unfurled above Fort Patrick Henry, in the name of the United States of America.

And now a fitting memorial is planned to proclaim to the world, and for all time, that George Rogers Clarke was a patriot—a hero—whose vision and achievement was one of the most important factors in the development of the republic of which our forefathers dreamed. We want this memorial to adequately express our gratitude and esteem for that brave little army and their inspired leader.

When you come to Vincennes to attend the George Rogers Clarke Memorial Celebration in 1929, you will visit the site of the old fort; you will see the spot where the little chapel of Father Gibault was built; and nearby, the plot where stood the home of Alice (and may easily imagine you smell her cherry pies); you will stand at the grave of Francis Vigo, the patriot who supplied Clarke's army with food and clothing and ammunition (and drop a tear for a poor old man who died in poverty); you will kneel at the tomb of Father Pierre Gibault, the French priest who secretly assisted Clarke in the capture of the fort; and you may even hear the peal of the little bell in the Old Cathedral belfry—the same little bell whose happy call summoned the citizens to the chapel in 1779 to receive the oath of allegiance to the United States of America.

But the old fort is gone; the home of Alice was razed long ago, and the little chapel gave way to a new cathedral a century or more since. There is but one authentic building of historical significance standing in Vincennes today, and that is the Harrison Mansion, the home of the first Governor of Indiana Territory.

Upon the nomination of John Adams, William Henry Harrison was unanimously elected Governor of Indiana Territory. However, he did not arrive in Vincennes until January 10, 1801. In his absence the government devolved upon his secretary, John Gibson, who arrived July 22, 1800. The census of that year gave the new Territory a population of 6,550.

Immediately upon his arrival in Vincennes, Harrison set about to find a suitable location and build a home for his family, whom he had left at Cincinnati; and in 1804 the house was ready for occupancy. Then Mrs. Harrison and the four children came west to join her husband, and for eight years made their home within the walls of the Harrison Mansion. In 1812, with the serious Indian trouble impending, the Governor thought the family would be safer in Cincinnati, so took them back before the battle of Tippecanoe.

Four of their children were born at the Harrison mansion, and while it is usually thought of as the Governor's Mansion, it was first of all a home. Here he not only made treaties with the Indian tribes and held council with his military leaders, and received and entertained many friends and celebrties who stopped at Vincennes in their travels, but he also helped his beloved Anne solve the household problems of servants, and croup, and firewood. He personally supervised the making of the winter's supply of kraut and wine; he sat with little John and Betsy and Lucy through long nights of measles of colic; he read to them on winter evenings by the firelight while their mother knitted their warm wool stockings; he romped with them on the lawn in the summer twilight, and did all the common homely things that fathers always do for the happiness and comfort of the families.

So the Harrison Mansion, the "HOME" of William Henry Harrison, remains the only authentic historical building in Vincennes, and interwoven with its history are the names of Clarke and Vigo and Buntin who were frequent visitors there. Much of the festivities of the sesquicentennial celebration are planned to take place within its walls. "These walls that have witnessed American history in the making" will also witness the appreciation of a loyal people. They shall see other centuries and other generations bow down to the achievements of our forefathers; and as time goes on, a fuller and deeper appreciation of their part in the "achievement of Independence itself."

NOTE: Previous to June 14th, 1778, when the United States flag of thirteen stars and thirteen stripes was adopted by Congress, each state used its own flag. In May, 1778, Clarke started with his army from the East to capture a fort 1000 miles away, so it is evident that he knew nothing of our Stars and Stripes when Hamilton surrendered Fort Sackville a few months later. Having no flag of Virginia, Clarke went to the village store and purchased the only material on hand—red and green homespun. He took this to Madame Godare who fashioned it into the flag of thirteen stripes, alternate red and green, according to the directions of the Colonel. This is the flag that he raised over the fort, which he renamed Fort Patrick Henry, in honor of his old friend.

Indiana Song of Service

(Tune of Onward Christian Soldiers)

Indiana Daughters, lift your voice in song!
Rally round your banner, all in joyful throng!
Raise on high your torch of truth, mounted by a star,
Gleaming love and loyalty,—radiant near and far!
Here's to Indiana! Pledge your faith anew!
Join in song triumphant, nowhere hearts more true.
Hail to Indiana! None than she more fair.
Let us serve her gladly, Daughters everywhere.
Working, hoping, striving with our star above,
Guiding o'er life's pathway, luminous with love!
Indiana Daughters, follow where our fathers trod,
One in thought of Country, faith in home, and God.

Vice-President General N. S. D. A. R.
Ex-Regent Caroline Scott Harrison Chapter.

The Flag Salute

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands—one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The American's Creed

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect Union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Consitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

QUOTATION FROM MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT GENERAL

Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau

It isn't your way and my way that matters so much right now as the way that youth shall tread its future, and it is our individual work upon the paths of life that counts in the preservation of the country that we love.

Fifty-eight million American citizens are qualified to vote, and out of that number forty-nine percent are women. Statistics show that in the Presidential elections since 1920, not more than thirty-five to forty percent of the women have gone to the polls. This average is far too small, considering the vital interests that women have in the affairs of the world.

It is a recognized fact that nowadays the greatest potency lies on the Group activity. This being the case, it is probable that a recalicitrant woman voter will respond to the appeal of her local leader in Chapter or Club life much more readily than she will to the stranger who appears at her door in an effort to awaken her to her responsibilities.

Therefore, the greatest opportunity lies within the grasp of the state and chapter officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Every chapter regent should make it a part of her official duty to see that her members register at the primaries and vote at the polls, November 6th.

To the possible criticism that the Daughters of the American Revolution is entering politics, there is but one reply. As an organization it has no concern with party policies or party affiliations. It is the individual responsibility to home and country, and the obligation that rests upon each member to use her utmost endeavors to help maintain the Government that her worthy ancestors established that really count.

Participation in elections and active interest in legislative measures are just as much a part of your patriotic duty as the reclaiming of historic spots or the education of aliens. Every election day in your community is important; every proposed law has a bearing, directly or indirectly, upon your home life. Let no one befog the issue for you.

Your party—whatever that party may be—calls you, Daughters of the American Revolution. May you respond wholeheartedly and intelligently, thus showing to the world that while you reverence the past, you hold equally dear the sacred trust which the great past has imposed.

AIMS AND PURPOSES

The object of the Society of the Children of the American Revolution shall be the acquisition of knowledge of American History; to help to preserve the places made sacred by the men and women who forwarded American Independence; to ascertain the deeds and honor the memories of children and youth who rendered service during the American Revolution; to promote the celebration of all patriotic anniversaries; to hold our American flag sacred above every other flag on earth; and to love, uphold, and extend the institutions of American liberty and patriotism, and the principles that made and saved our country.

OUR FLAG OF LIBERTY

Written for the National Society of the Children of the American Revolution by the Founder, Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, and authorized by a vote of the National Board of the Society, to be used by the local societies as a part of the Salute to the Flag.

Our Country's Flag, to thee we give
Our heart's devotion while we live;
Symbol of all that makes us free,
To thee we render loyalty.

In every crimson waving stripe
We see devotion's prototype
With all our heart's blood we'll defend
Our dear old Flag unto the end.

And white as yonder fluttering bar,
We'll keep our souls in peace or war,
That we may ever worthy be,
Oh, Flag, to live or die for thee.

And true as the field of blue we'll be,
And serve our country faithfully,
Devotion—purity—and truth
Shall form the vanguard of our youth.

Then stars like thine with radiant light
Shall make this land of promise bright,
When all her youth shall loyal be,
To thee, Oh, Flag of Liberty.
